Executive Summary

To keep up to date professionally, it is important to attend additional training regularly by any means, acquire new skills, and successfully complete training. On this deliverable we present information on the ways the CLIMASP staffs were supported in building their capacities in the CLIMASP curriculum design, development and implementation. The emphasis on the online continuous support for the involved teaching staff, approximately up to 100 was to assist them in implementing the peer-reviewing process. To this end, we have developed one group of peer-reviewers in each partner university and assign each one to peer-review the course syllabi and course modules developed in another university. The list with the groups is provided in the appendix. This proved to be a very effective mean of peer-reviewing and at the same time reduced the risk to be positively oriented to one's own course syllabi/modules. Each group had been assigned to work on a specific template for peer-reviewing and exchange their reviews. The process was supported through the online community of practice (Figure 1) which is integrated into the CLIMASP Website (<http://www.ictinesd.org/unescochair/climasp/climasp-cop/>). The function of the OCoP is based on the Oracle systems learning stream (Figure 2).

Welcome to the CLIMASP Online Community of Practice

CLIMASP is a European Commission TEMPUS funded programme that aims to develop interdisciplinary programmes in climate change and sustainability policy for undergraduate students across 10 universities in Egypt, Jordan and Lebanon, coordinated by the University of Crete.

The CLIMASP Online Community of Practice (OCoP) provides an interactive environment for its members to exchange, discuss and share ideas, suggestions, solutions, tools and methodologies focusing on the core areas of CLIMASP. It also serves as a repository and online environment to support our capacity-building initiatives where university teaching staff from partner institutions are being trained to revise their courses towards meeting the CLIMASP objectives.
